To Get U.S. Aid, Israel And Arab LandsMust ShowGenuine United Effort On Refugee Trouble

The United States gave warning to other member countries of the United Nations at Lake Success that the extent of its financial contribution to Palestine refugees relief programs would be measured henceforth against the amount that other nations gave and would be "greatly affected" by the willingness of Israel and the Arab lands to work together on a solution.

Since the people of the United States have underwritten $27,450,000 of a total of $38,021,040 in cash received from all sources for the current $54,000,000 program from Jan. 1, 1950, to June 30, 1951, the words of John C. Ross in the General Assembly's Special Political Committee carried weight, says the New York Times.

Mr. Ross introduced a resolution co-sponsored by the United States delegation with France, Turkey and Britain. It was designed to tidy up the financing of the refugee relief situation. The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East has requested $50,000,000 to carry it through until June 30, 1952.

"For the program of the United Nations to achieve the continued support of the Executive and Legislative branches of my Government it is clearly necessary for it to represent a genuine united effort, financially, as well as in terms of personal effort and sacrifice," Mr. Ross declared.

"It is clear that the action that may be taken by the United States Government in the early months of 1951 in considering legislative action relating to this program will be influenced greatly by actions of other governments taken in support of the program of the agency.

"It will also be greatly affected by actions that may be taken in the [illegible] three or four months by Near Eastern governments, in collaboration with the agency, in making plans for reintegration of refugees."

Mr. Ross announced that the Executive branch of his Government "will be prepared to request Congress for an appropriate contribution" to Palestine relief. However, he said the delegation could not make any commitment at this time as to the amount that Washington "may eventually" approve.

Hope for a calm debate on the best means of administering and financing the refugee problem was soon dispelled when delicate political questions were tossed around the conference room.

Israel would sooner pay compensation for lands abandoned by Arab refugees, variously estimated at 800,000 to 1,000,000, than have them return to their former homes; any idea of repatriating this group is "completely unrealistic," Abba Eban, permanent delegate for Israel, told the Special Political Committee of the United Nations Assembly.

This position was heavily attacked by representatives of various Arab states who feel that a return of Palestine refugees to their homes is a paramount issue to be settled before there is any possibility of permanent peace in the Middle East. "Reintegration," in some form, also had the support of delegates outside the region directly concerned, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

Political aspects of this potentially explosive situation were interjected in the committee's debate on a joint resolution, submitted by France, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States, concerning relief for these refugees. The resolution proposes a fund of $30,000,000 for direct relief for the period from July 1, 1951, to June 30, 1952, and the equivalent of $30,000,000, to be known as a reintegration fund, for the same period. Relief funds already pledged will be sufficient to carry on the program from now until [illegible] already received are kept, sponsors of the resolution reported.

No method of financing such a program was suggested in the resolution. The measure will be referred to the Budget Committee of the General Assembly for advice

Lag In Airlift To Israel Troubles Iraqi Jews

Jews in Baghdad are worried about and dissatisfied with the rate at which Israel is moving Iraqi Jews out of Baghdad under the special law that permits them to leave during a one-year period that began last May. The Iraqi Cabinet has slowed the rate at which applications for "denationalization" are being authorized in order not to leave a big backlog of Jews in the country who have lost their Iraqi nationality while still waiting to migrate, reports the New York Times.

The law providing for the migration of Jews can be cancelled at any time and the Baghdad authorities are not pleased with the slow pace of the migration to Israel.

Near East Airlines is handling the whole operation with a rather limited schedule of flights.

Up to approximately the middle of October, according to figures available at Baghdad some 15,000 to 16,000 Jews left Baghdad on the airlift to Cyprus en route to Israel. The estimated total of those who eventually intend to leave is about 70,000. Some 30,000 have made application for denationalization and gone through all the processing, waiting only for approval of their applications by the Cabinet, which is holding back because of the slowness of the air-lift.

The number of those applying to leave has been growing much more rapidly than the number leaving the country. At the end of July there were about 15,000 to 16,000 persons, of whom more than 8,000 were adults, who had completed their denationalization processing and were awaiting Cabinet approval and there are now an estimated 30,000. At the end of July about 5,000 had had their denationalization request approved by the Cabinet and were awaiting transportation. In this category there are now some 1,000 to 2,000 persons as a result of the cut in the rate of Cabinet approvals.

Essentially the decision of the Cabinet to slow the rate of approvals is helpful, as the position of a person who has given up his nationality is obviously difficult. Most of these persons are without employment and are living on sav-

Specialist Was First To Cure Tetanus

Dr. Harney J. Dryfuss of 420 West End Avenue, New York, proctologist at St. Clare's Hospital, died in the hospital after a brief illness. His age was 71. Born in Paducah, Ky., Dr. Dryfuss received a B. S. degree in 1899 from the College of the City of New York and his medical degree from the University of Louisville Medical School. He served his interneship at Louisville City Hospital.

Early in his service he became interested in acute tetanus. He reasoned that as the bacillus tetanus remained localized in the entrance of infection, amputation or wide excision should be effective in cure. In December, 1903, he tested his theory successfully. This was said to be the first case of tetanus ever cured in that hospital.

In 1904, Dr. Dryfuss became a research man in physiological chemistry at Cornell Medical College and later was named instructor. He received a medical degree from Cornell in 1906. From 1909 to 1912 he served as proctologist in the Cornell Clinic.

Dr. Dryfuss joined the rectal department of Polyclinic Hospital in New York in 1908 and served as chief of clinic and instructor in rectal diseases from 1912 to 1918. He also had been rectal surgeon at St. Bartholomew's Clinic.

As early as 1906, he began the use of mineral oil as an intestinal lubricant. The next year he added agar as an intestinal exerciser. In November, 1934, he joined the staff of St. Clare's Hospital. He was attending proctologist and chief of its out-patient department at his death. Dr. Dryfuss was a member of the county, state and national medical associations, an honorary member of the Southwestern Kentucky Medical Association and a member of Phi Chi Medical Fraternity.

Surviving are his widow, the former Isabel B. Singer; a son, John Augustus; a daughter, Rosanne Claire; a sister, Mrs. James Gruenebaum of Paducah, Ky., and two grandchildren.

Find New Sweet Water Supply For Jerusalem

A new water supply for the City of Jerusalem has just been made available through the boring operations conducted by the Jewish National Fund in the Judean Hills, according to a statement made by Elias M. Epstein, Overseas Director of the Jewish National Fund, in New York. This new water supply renders Jerusalem independent of the water sources in the Arab-controlled areas. Using an American Hopper Borer which went down to a depth of 300 meters at Kfar Uriah about ten miles from Jerusalem, the organization found sweet water in quantities of 300 cubic meters per hour, Mr. Epstein declared. The present water supply of Jerusalem is being drawn from near Givat Brenner, more than twenty miles from the City.

Mr. Epstein who is in the U. S. to confer with American leaders on the Jewish National Fund on plans for its coming Jubilee Year (it was established in 1901), also said that the largest reclamation project in Israel, the drainage of the Huleh Basin in Galilee, where 40,000 dunams or 10,000 acres are under water, has been initiated by the J. N. F. The elimination of the marshes of Huleh would transform the face of Eastern Galilee and prove of outstanding economic value in the agricultural development of Israel and its absorption of thousands of immigrants now entering its borders, Mr. Epstein said.

The significance of the new source is explained by the fact that it provides over half the quantity of water now being consumed by the Jerusalem population. The advantage of the shorter pipeline which has now been constructed, from a security as well as economic point of view, was also emphasized by the engineers [illegible] ed that the boring operations near Jerusalem were in charge of E. Berahyau, who had studied at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The water supply operations in the vicinity of Jerusalem were part of the Jewish National Fund's Israel-wide program of providing settlements with drinking water and irrigation works.

Both the Jerusalem water project and Huleh reclamation enterprises will be highlighted, along with other achievements at the jubilee conference of the Jewish National Fund in Washington on December 22, under the chairmanship of Dr. Harris J. Levine, president of the J. N. F. The conference will be attended by Dr. Abraham Granott, head of the World Board Directors of the Fund in Jerusalem, at the invitation of the golden jubilee committee of the J. N. F. of which Dr. Israel Goldstein, Rabbi of Con-

Colleges Urged To Self-Audit For Bias

All educational institutions in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, and Wisconsin were urged to "engage in a self-audit of their policies and practices" for the purpose of discovering "areas of discrimination or practices and areas in which promising progress has been made in removing inter-cultural misunderstandings and contentions."

Agreement on this recommendation was reached in separate meetings by each of the four state delegations at a two-day regional conference on discrimination in higher education, held in Chicago. It was sponsored by the American Council of Education, with the cooperation of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith.

The 175 presidents, deans and registrars, representing about seventy-five Midwestern colleges and universities, also decided upon a reiteration of the principles of the national conference of discriminations in college admissions held in Chicago a year ago. This statement of policy read as follows:

"All institutions of higher learning should re-examine their philosophies in the light of the dignity of every human being, and his right of equality of educational opportunity, and make sure that the procedures instituted in their admissions programs are administered in such a way that the specific human worth and the dignity of no individual is violated because of his membership in any cultural, racial or socio-economic group.

"It is never justifiable in our democratic society to discriminate against an individual for any reason which minimizes his stature as a member of the human family."

U.S. Assistant Defense Secretary Attains Highest Rank Ever Held By A Woman In Nation's Military Establishment

Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, of New York, who was recommended for the post of U. S. Assistant Secretary of Defense by Secretary George C. Marshall, will hold the highest rank in the nation's military establishment ever held by a woman. She will be in charge of man-power and personnel policy, in both of which fields she is an acknowledged authority. The defense post pays $15,000 a year.

Mrs. Rosenberg, who is forty-eight, was born in Budapest, Hungary, and was brought to the United States by her parents in 1912. She became a naturalized citizen in 1919. Her husband, Julius, is in the carpet and rug business. Her son, Thomas J., is associated with her in a labor and personnel relations firm in New York.

She joined the New Deal administration in 1934 and became a regional director of the National Recovery Administration in 1939. From that time on she was given numerous special assignments by President Roosevelt. She was a consultant on retaining and re-employment from 1941 to 1945 and was personal representative of President Roosevelt and President Truman to the European theater of war to report on problems of returning soldiers.

Mrs. Rosenberg served more recently on the advisory committee for compulsory military training, which recommended adoption of U. M. T. as a permanent peacetime feature of American Military organization.

She also served on many New York City committees and was chairman of the [illegible] welfare of the New York State Constitutional Convention in 1937. She organized the first veteran's service center in New York City to give employment, legal and educational advice. The center still functions at 500 Park Avenue. In 1937 she organized the New York City Industrial Relations Board for the late Mayor F. H. LaGuardia.

In her new post, Mrs. Rosenberg will work with public service organizations and labor and veterans groups to get their views on manpower policies. She also will serve as an adviser and co-ordinator of major plans and programs between various divisions of the Defense Department and between the department and other Federal agencies.

It was understood that Secretary Marshall decided on Mrs. Rosenberg as Mr. Griffith's successor after Mr. Truman left the capital on his current yachting trip. The President was said to have sent back word that she was acceptable, says the New York Herald Tribune. In his statement, Secretary Marshall said only that he had advised the President, Mrs. Rosenberg was his choice.

The selection of Mrs. Rosenberg for the post revived speculation as to the likelihood of a mobilization and possibly a draft of women for defense duties. Mr. Truman disclosed as long ago as May 4 that he had something like that in mind and that secret studies were being being made.

This came out at a press conference when he was asked if he planned to ask Congress for mobilization of women for civilian defense in case of war. Mr. Truman replied that "we will cross that bridge when we get to it" and added that he thought it should be done. Asked if it [illegible] are working out plans, and they are not for publication." The world war systems used in England and other foreign countries, he said, are being studied.

Moshe Mateus, of Tel Aviv, Israel, a recognized Israeli artist, will give an exhibition of his paintings at 1541 Crescent Street, starting Saturday, November 18. The exhibition will be opened formally on Saturday, at 8.30 p.m., by Arie Ben Tsvim, Consul of Israel in Canada. Mr. Mateus, who is spending several months in Montreal, is showing paintings of Israel, Canada, and the United States. His Israeli paintings were done in Tel Aviv, and sent from New York for the exhibition here. There will be an exhibition of his work in Toronto, and in New York. According to Mr. Mateus, the Israeli artist is "interested in character more than in subject"; and some of his paintings are semi-abstractions; although others are realistic in approach. Mr. Mateus is working on a portrait of Samuel E. Schulzberg, K.C., co-president of the Zionist Organization of Canada; and this may be ready to be included in the exhibition. There is a portrait also of Thomas Craven, famous American art critic; and semi-abstract oil paintings belonging to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt; and to the Museum of Fine Arts in Houston, Texas. Mr. Mateus has travelled all over the United States during his three years there; and has exhibited his work all over the country. One group of his paintings, being shown now in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, was recently televised.

Rosenfeld Gets War Order For Women's Wear

A stand-by order for several hundred thousand cotton suits and dresses for women personnel in the Navy and Marine Corps has been placed with Henry Rosenfeld, Inc., famous New York dress manufacturer. The order, believed to be the largest of its kind in the New York area, is part of the defense mobilization program to be put into effect in the event of emergency.

Paul Hershcopf, secretary-treasurer and production manager of the Rosenfeld concern, said the contract would not interfere seriously with civilian production. He said that production could be expanded to meet a given situation by taking on additional contractors. Materials will be provided either from Government stockpiles or through priorities.

Trade sources said that numerous garment manufacturing companies in the New York area would eventually be drawn into the program, which provides for negotiated contracts as contrasted with current practice of advertised bids and awards to the lowest bidder. In the framework of industrial mobilization planning however, the negotiated contracts most probably will contain escalator clauses, renegotiation provisions, and an excess profits tax clause to protect the contractor and the Government.

As the largest manufacturing center of women's apparel, New York will receive a great bulk of the contracts for women military personnel. Among the items now being contracted for are dresses, blouses, pyjamas, handbags, kits, hosiery and uniforms.

The Munitions Board, supervisory agency for the program, is taking into account the possibility of bomb attacks on the city and has been negotiating, therefore, with manufacturers in many parts of the country. While it is hoped that there will be no need to put the program into effect, it is stressed that much valuable time has been gained by stand-by orders. The work currently going on will eliminate duplication and overlapping of orders which plagued Government agencies during the last war.

Not more than 50 per cent of the capacity of garment manufacturers would be utilized in any event, the dress houses were informed.

Dr. Robert S. Marcus, director of the central office of the World Jewish Congress, and one of its consultants at the United Nations, flew to Buenos Aires, Argentina, to tour a number of Latin American countries and meet with leaders of the Jewish communities in connection with the preparations for a continent-wide conference called by the World Jewish Congress. He will also discuss problems affecting the cultural, religious, and communal life of those communities in order to forge closer ties on matters of Jewish concern between all the Jewish communities in the Western Hemisphere. The World Jewish Congress has affiliated groups or associations in all the twenty-one Latin American Republics. Its Argentine affiliate, the DAIA, central body of Jewish organizations of Argentina, represents the 380,000 Jews of that country.

Israel Exports Fresh Flowers

Friends can now "Say it with Israel flowers". Fresh-cut flowers, shipped to the United States by air freight, are the latest addition to Israel's growing list of exports. This venture was pioneered by Goffman Associates Import Co., Inc., of 201 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., which has just contracted for an annual $60,000 worth of Israel flowers for distribution and sale in the United States and Canada.

The company is headed by Abraham M. Goffman, horticulturist, who reports that more than 100 communal and small-holders settlements in Israel raise flowers commercially. The industry — production, transport and retailing — provides employment for several thousand persons, among them many newly arrived, unskilled immigrants.

The chief variety produced is the gladiolus, grown from a native bulb which yields a flower said to be superior to the American and European kinds. Other types produced commercially in Israel include iris, sweet pea, calla, narcissus, carnation, and some roses.

The fresh flower shipments will be followed shortly by potted plants featuring the "Sabra", native Israel cactus.

Flowers produced for export undergo strict inspection by the Israel Ministry of Agriculture before being released for export. The flowers are packed for shipment in specially treated protective wax paper and are stored in cold storage bins during the flight, which averages about 20 hours from Israel to the U. S. The flowers undergo a second inspection upon arrival in the U.S. and are stored in refrigerated compartments until distributed. The entire operation, from field to florist, takes only three days.

While price competition is a major problem, Goffman Associates foresee good prospects for Israel flowers in this country. Flowers grow in Israel all year round and require little foreign exchange expenditure because only small quantities of fertilizer and packing materials have to be imported.

Making The Community "Study-Minded"

BY DR. M. C. WEILER, RABBI OF THE UNITED JEWISH REFORM CONGREGATION OF JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA

It is well known that Torah Lishmah — learning for its own sake has been an important aspect of the Jewish attitude to life. The desire for learning as such, not for gain or livelihood, but for mental exercise and deeper knowledge, has been the hallowed possession of the vast majority of the Jewish people. Thus, learning as a value has been Judaism's contribution to civilization. Nowhere, except amongst the Brahmans in India, has the study of sacred literature been accorded such prominence as in Jewish life.

Judaism has been the religion of the Torah, the Torah Shebichtav—the written Torah and the Torah Shen'al—the oral Law. Maimonides, the greatest Jew of the Middle Ages, in his code in the section entitled "Hilchot Talmud Torah" (1, 8-10) summarizes the spirit of Jewish tradition when he says: "Every Jew is obligated to study the Torah whether he be poor or rich, in good physical health or a sufferer, young or very old. Even if he goes begging from door to door, and has a wife and children to support, he must set aside time for the study of the Torah . . . And how long must he continue to study? Until his death."

Jews, therefore, used to engage in one form of study or another: the ignorant and the learned, the young and the old. In the course of time, even the Synagogue, known as the Beth Haknesset (House of Assembly) or the Beth Hatephilah (House of Prayer) gave way to the more popular terms "Beth Hamidrash" (the House of Study), or to the Yiddish name "Shul" (School). These latter names took precedence because even the public worship of the Synagogue gave to study a focal centre.

The Torah was read on Monday and Thursday mornings, on the Sabbaths and Festivals. At the latter Services a portion from the Prophets was added, and on special occasions the Psalms, the Megilloth and the Mishnaic Tractate "Sayings of the Fathers", were recited during the Services. Selections from the Mishnah were read on a Yahrtzeit, whilst at midnight (Tikkun Chatzot) on the night of Shavuoth and "Hoshanah Rabbah" the pious recited portions from Jewish Sacred lore at midnight. But, apart from these Services, it was a feature of the Synagogue that people regularly assembled there at set hours, not for gossip or mere social intercourse, but for the purpose of studying the Rabbinic commentaries of the Bible, the Mishnah, the "Ein Yaakov," the Talmud, the various Rabbinic codes, the Musar literature, etc.

It was my privilege in 1941, during a prolonged war-time visit to the land of Israel, to witness such a rich Synagogue life in a house in Haifa, which had been converted into a Synagogue and which served, between Services, as a Yeshivah (Talmudic Academy). This Chassidic "Shtibbel" was led by the brother-in-law of the famous "Gorer Rebbe," who had thousands of followers all over Eastern Europe, particularly in Poland and lately in Israel.

Whilst attending a Sabbath Service I noticed that there was a break of over half an hour, a "Hafsokeh," to give an opportunity to the Congregation, children, youths and adults, the "Talmid Chacham" and the "Am Haaretz" (the scholar and the ignorant man) to turn to their studies. Some read Psalms in sing-song fashion. The more learned probed into the commentaries of the Biblical portion of the week, and the most learned pored over intricate passages of the Talmud, whilst the intellectual and spiritual elite lost themselves in the mystic "Kabbalah."

Such was the hegemony of learning, as a universal and all-inclusive principle, encompassing all groups of Jewry, which remained intact in Eastern Europe until the Hitler cataclysm of a decade ago, when his savage hordes destroyed the whole of Jewish life there.

We know that there were great weaknesses in traditional Jewish learning. There was, for instance, neither scientific method nor system in their study. Centuries of a Ghetto existence obliterated the faculty for research and critical investigation.

To make up for these deficiencies, German Jewry of the 19th Century, leading Western European Jewish thought and life, introduced the science of Judaism, known as the "Juedische Wissenschaft." Influenced by the era of emancipation, they were responsible for the "Haskalah" or Enlightenment Movement. In honour of the leaders of the science of Judaism, it should be remembered that in their research they re-discovered the beauties of our historic culture and provided the answer that there was no truth in the contention of the higher anti-Semites, that the Jews were culturally and spiritually the pedlars that economic circumstances made of many of them.

The science of Judaism made a great contribution to Jewish life. Subsequently it gave an impetus to study and research amongst those Jews in Eastern Europe who had become secularized. All School systems in the Ghettoes of Eastern Europe benefitted from its trial and error methods, including the modernized Cheder Metukan, which employed the method of Ivrith b'Ivrith, and the secular Hebrew Schools called "Tarbuth," as well as the secular Yiddish Schools, under the auspices of the "Zentrale Yiddishe Shul Onstalten." All these were influenced by the Haskalah Movement to introduce method and systems in their education.

Even Orthodox Judaism, of the "Yavneh" or the "Torah V'derech Eretz" types, tried to meet the challenge of the time by adding secular subjects to sacred teachings. If not for Leopold Zung, Abraham Geiger and other luminaries of the Science of Judaism, there would not have emerged the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, nor the Yiddish Scientific Institute of Vilna, known as YIWO.

But the Juedische Wissenschaft also suffered from great weaknesses. Although its scientific research into the past of Judaism was invaluable, yet it was deficient, because more often than not, the motivation for its scientific research was to find a justification for the continued existence of the Jews amongst the nations of the world, and particularly for their claim to citizenship. It was a negative and apologetic motivating force which tried to cover up those aspects of the Jewish past or present which did not seem to be of credit to the Jewish community.

Its greatest weakness, however, lay in the fact that, unlike the traditional "Lernen" of Eastern Europe, it did not capture the masses, but remained the concern of only the expert few, the professional Jews. Most Jews in Western Europe did not benefit from the work of the Science of Judaism, because for most of them the Synagogue was reduced to a Beth Hatephilah, to a House of Prayer frequented only occasionally. For many Western Jews, there existed only two pillars of Judaism, the "Avodah"—the divine Service and the "Gemiluth Chassadim"—charity and philanthropy. But the main pillar of "Torah" — knowledge— was absent.

To attempt to close the breach and to put an end to apathy and indifference, which came as a result of ignorance, the late Franz Rosenzweig, of Frankfurt Am Main, the most Jewish city in Germany, established in 1920 a "Lehrhaus"—a House of Learning. His idea was that by means of learning, he might succeed in enticing the masses of Jews to return to Judaism and Jewish life. He felt that by weekly lectures and a continuous and systematic study of the texts of historic Judaism, scientifically but in the spirit of the Eastern European "Lernan," the "Lehrhaus" would succeed in re-creating a Jewish environment for many Jews of all classes, leading thus to a creative effort. Franz Rosenzweig's aim was to seek truth. It was science for the sake of science and not as a means to fight anti-Semitism.

It is difficult to estimate whether the "Lehrhaus" was a success, firstly because it did not exist long enough to prove itself. The Hitler Regime, after tolerating for a few years a spurious "cultural autonomy," put an end to all such endeavours. Secondly because in all countries of Western Europe, as well as in the English-speaking world, Jewish life is not organic. In Eastern Europe the long tradition of learning for all was organic, so it was easy to add scientific research, discipline and the pursuit of truth to an intense Jewish learning.

As an example, I may quote the successful work of the late Chief Rabbi of Vienna, Prof. Chayes, who raised many disciples, who have since carried the teaching of the Torah in a traditional and in a modern garb, to all corners of the earth. Chayes succeeded, because most of his students came from the Ghetto of Galicia, where the environment had endowed them with a rich background of Judaism. All that his pupils received in the Rabbinic seminary, or the Teachers' Paedagogium of enlightened Vienna was polish and a scientific approach. Chayes in Vienna added "Menschlichkeit" to their Judaism.

In Israel the synthesis between Judaism and the humanities, as envisaged by Prof. Klausner, presents no difficulty. The union of man and Jew, as taught by Achad Haam, is a fact. Torah Lishmah is a reality. In the towns and villages of the Land of Israel, everything human is Jewish and, conversely, everything Jewish is human. There you find learning as a value, as in the old days, practised by all sections of the community, but, unlike the old days, this learning has a modern scientific application. Apart from knowledge imparted to the children in the various schools of all shades of opinion, from the ultra-Orthodox, Agudath Israel, to the extreme Leftist and Marxist Hashomer Hatzair, there are also folk universities and seminaries of all types, notably those under the auspices of the cultural Department of the Histadruth, the General Federation of Jewish Labour, the extension courses of the Hebrew University and of the municipalities. On the Sabbaths and during Festivals, lectures are given in cinemas or other improvised buildings under the auspices of the Beth Am, the People's House. New forms have evolved there—witness the popular modern Palestinian institution of the Oneg Shabbat, and the Friday and Erev Yom Tov editions of all newspapers of all parties and points of view, which contain special scholarly supplements.

Let us turn to the position in South Africa. Together with the general community, we are giving some thought to adult Jewish education. The Seminaries for teachers and ministers, which have been established of late, are laudable efforts, because no community can perpetuate itself without learning. These institutions of higher learning will train ministers and teachers, as well as help to perpetuate and advance Jewish scholarship and research. But these teachers' seminaries cater only for the few, for those for whom Judaism may become a "Tachlith"—a career, a profession. But what about the many? What about the average Jew? What about the Jewish masses?

In 1936, during the visit to Dr. I. N. Steinberg, who came to this country on a mission on behalf of the YIWO, Dr. H. Sonnabend, well-known lecturer of the Witwatersrand University, and respected communal leader, became principal of a Jewish People's College, which met on Thursday evenings in the spacious and inviting rooms of the Johannesburg Public Library. This institution, it was hoped, would become a people's University. Its existence was short-lived, though the lecturers were well known in the community and included the late Chief Rabbi Prof. J. L. Landay; the late D. Mirowsky, a Hebrew educationist of note; the late Dr. Wulf Sachs, a psychologist of world renown; Mr. M. Szur, an expert in Yiddish literature; Dr. Sonnabend himself and the writer of these lines. Yet after the initial success the Jewish People's College had to close its doors through the lack of interest of those for whom it was intended.

My feeling is that for the time being the burden of adult Jewish education will have to rest on the shoulders of the larger Jewish congregations and secular associations. Difficult though it may be, each important Synagogal or secular unit should try and establish an adult Institute of its own. It is the duty of every Rabbi and minister to consider this kind of work as of the greatest importance. Rather start thus in a small way before attempting anything of the dimensions of a Lehrhaus in South Africa. Here is a suggestion of a simple scheme which has proved successful. One evening a week is set aside as an adult education night. On such an evening the session begins at 7.30 p.m. The first hour is devoted to a study of Hebrew, and classes are provided for beginners and advanced pupils. After a brief tea interval, there follows at 8.30 a study circle, with courses covering two semesters each year.

The subject of the series should run through February, March, April, May and June. It may be a course on the Bible as literature and its historic development, or Jewish history, following the outline as suggested by the brilliant historian, S. M. Dubnow. During the shorter semester of October, November and the first part of December one might choose customs and ceremonies, or the prayer book, or Jewish folklore. In addition, once a month there is a guest lecture by a prominent South African Jew, or a visitor from overseas. Such lectures are of a more popular nature and deal with Zionism, anti-Semitism, the various trends in modern Judaism, etc.

I have experimented with such a scheme of an adult institute for the last five years, and have been reasonably successful. One should add the rueful confession that from a congregation of thousands one could muster only 60 regular attendants to such an adult Institute, except when a guest lecturer of great repute gives a talk on a very controversial topic. Then hundreds flock to hear. Yet I have always considered our modest cultural work for the adults of the congregation worthy of perseverance. Some today have even become teachers of Hebrew or Judaism in our Hebrew schools. A modest scheme, however, if undertaken by a number of Congregations and Organizations, would justify an over-all council for adult Jewish education on a city scale and eventually on a provincial and national basis, which would serve as a clearing house, and would coordinate and encourage all such efforts on behalf of adult Jewish Education, by providing syllabi and curricula. When such individual schemes of adult Jewish education have become a success and the community has become "study-minded", then perhaps will the time be ripe for a Lehrhaus or a Jewish People's Institute.

Because Israel has a much higher scientific standard and trained personnel available, the Plough Sales Corporation, manufacturer of pharmaceuticals, has decided to open a branch in Petah Tikvah rather than Cairo, according to advance notices issued by Matalon Brothers of Tel Aviv, the Israel partners. The factory in Israel will supply the Middle Eastern countries, including India, Persia and Turkey. The Plough Company is investing $150,000 in the venture, and Matalon Bros. are putting up the building on 3500 square metres of land they purchased on the Petah Tikvah road. The enterprise will be directed by an American manager and an Israel technician. Depending on the success of the factory, the American company is reported ready to increase the share capital to $1,000,000.

Zoning restrictions on travel in private cars became effective in Israel on November 5 as a further measure in the country's austerity program. The restrictions are similar to Britain's World War II travel bans. In Tel Aviv, for example, licenses for unrestricted travel throughout the country have been granted to only ten percent of the private cars. About 16 percent of the applicants will be allowed to travel only within municipal zones; 50 percent may travel up to a radius of 25 kilometers, with Tel Aviv as the center; some 650 cars have permits to travel outside the municipal area to specified destinations.

Israel observed the fifth anniversary of the United Nations by dispatching its contribution of medical supplies to United Nations forces in Korea. The consignment totals 5,700 kilograms including 2,850 kilograms of penicillin and a variety of vaccines prepared in Israel. It went aboard the Steamship LaGuardia, addressed to "UN Unified Command, Korea, through the Secretary General."

"...AND THAT'S HOW

we built the school"

It's the biggest contract I ever went after, so I lost no time in getting over to my bank manager.

"George," I said, "I'll need some help to handle a job this size."

We went over the whole thing, discussed how much I would need. When I landed the contract he gave me a line of credit and I was able to go right ahead. Now the school's as good as built.

To Import Chanukah Parcels From Israel

A group of Asbury Park, N. J., businessmen has invested $300,000 in a project to promote the export of Israel products. The first merchandise they are bringing to the United States will be special Chanukah packages containing a variety of delicacies made in Israel. The idea of reversing the sending of packages was originated by Zemel Resnick, amusement park owner, who now serves as secretary of the Israel-Middle East Corporation, located at the Empire State Building.

The Chanukah packages, which will sell for $10.50, each contain a pint of olive oil, a box of three cakes of olive oil soap, candied etrog and citrus peels, marmalade, mulberry jam, mints, a can of gefilte fish, a can of "sabre" (cactus fruit) compote, a can of dill pickles, three pounds of candy, 10 post-cards, a tube of toothpaste, and a box of Chanukah candles. In attempting to increase exports and create a more equitable balance of trade, the people of Israel forego many of these luxuries themselves.

Hand-tailored men's cashmere and wool overcoats made in Israel are now on sale in the United States. A shipment of several hundred winter-weight coats, first of their kind ever to reach the American market from Israel, were flown from Jerusalem by Trans-World Airlines, to reach retail stores in time for the winter season.

The coats are of two types — a mixture of cashmere and wool and all-wool — and were hand-made by Heilig and Company of Jerusalem whose tailors had practiced their trade in Europe for many years. The Company is one of the leading men's clothing manufacturers in Israel and recently enlarged its factory to give employment to new immigrants. Orders previously placed by Abraham and Strauss, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Bloomingdale's New York, are being filled from the shipment. Walter Easton, 915 Broadway, is United States representative of the Israel manufacturer and has a stock of the garments on hand for retailers.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Diamond, Roy Street East, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Marvin, who was called to the Reading of the Law at Chevra Shaas Synagogue. He is the brother of Harvey and Allan; grandson of H. B. Prashker, Van Horne Avenue, and the late Mrs. Sadie Prashker; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. Diamond; and great-grandson of Mrs. S. Diamond, Park Avenue, who is one hundred and two years old; and of the late S. Diamond. Kiddush was observed at the Synagogue; and there was a dinner-reception at Berman's for sixty guests, members of the immediate family. Receiving, Mrs. Diamond, mother of the bar-mitzvah boy, wore a black silk cocktail dress, with a square neckline, rhinestone accessories, and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Diamond, the great-grandmother, wore a black crepe dress, with beaded embroidery on the bodice. Rabbi J. Grossman, Edward Charles Street, Marvin's teacher, spoke; and so did Marvin. Harry Zuckerman, Clark Street, was toastmaster. The bar-mitzvah cake was round, with a Mogen David in the centre; and the table centrepiece was of roses, carnations, and pom-poms. Mr. and Mrs. J. Botofsky, of Ottawa, Ont.; and Mrs. L. Kruger, of South Africa, were present.

Miss Jennie Reiter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Reiter, Arcade Street, and fiancee of Irving Bronstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. The hostesses were Mrs. H. Reiter, mother of the bride-elect, and Miss Rose Reiter, Arcade Street, sister of the bride-elect; Mrs. A. Bronstein, St. Lawrence Boulevard, mother of the groom-elect; and Mrs. Issie Weiskopf, St. Lawrence Boulevard. Mrs. Reiter wore a beige crepe dress, with a round neckline, and embroidered bodice, and corsage of yellow Tea roses; Miss Rose Reiter, an emerald-green velvet dress, with a low neckline, and a pink velvet hat, rhinestone accessories, and a corsage of pink roses; Mrs. Bronstein, a brown faille dress, with a round neckline, rust-colored hat, and a corsage of yellow roses; and Mrs. Weiskopf, a green taffeta dress, with a boat-shaped neckline, matching hat, and corsage of pink roses. The honoree, Miss Jennie Reiter, wore a dress composed of a black velvet bodice, and rust-shaded metallic skirt, and fashioned with a low, round neckline. She had a black velvet hat, matching purse, and a corsage of Talisman roses. Chrysanthemums and pom-poms were combined with pink carnations and roses to form the table decoration.

Miss Eleanore Saller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Saller, Mount Royal Avenue East, fiancee of Jack Gottlieb, son of Mrs. S. Gottlieb, Colonial Avenue, and the late M. Gottlieb, whose marriage will take place on February 4, at Beth Yehuda Synagogue, was entertained at a linen and personal shower at the Bucharest. The hostesses were: Mesdames A. Fogel, Mount Royal Avenue East; S. Perzow, Clark Street; S. Goldman, St. Urbain Street; S. Ostroff, Pine Avenue East; H. Gottlieb, Wiseman Avenue; and S. Smith, Henri Julien Street. One hundred and fifty guests were present. Mrs. Fogel wore a taupe crepe dress, with brown accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses; Mrs. Perzow, a taupe faille dress, with matching shoes, and green accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses; Mrs. Goldman, a grey crepe dress, with grey accessories, and a corsage of pink roses; Mrs. Ostroff, a black crepe dress, with black accessories, and a corsage of red roses; Mrs. Gottlieb, a black crepe dress, with matching accessories, and a corsage of red roses; and Mrs. Smith, a black crepe dress, with grey accessories, and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Saller, mother of the bride-elect, wore a royal-blue faille dress, with a square-cut neckline having rhinestone clasps at the corners, and a draped skirt, with a navy-blue felt hat, with feather trimming, and a corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Gottlieb, mother of the groom-elect, wore a grey crepe dress, with beaded embroidery at the neckline, black accessories, and a corsage of red roses. Miss Saller, the honoree, wore a taupe crepe dress, with a high neckline and draped skirt, and had chocolate-shaded accessories, and a corsage of orchids. The table was decorated with pom-poms and carnations; and a candelabrum at each end of the tea table.

one-quarter teaspoon salt
one-half pound butter

one-half pint sour cream
three eggs

Sift together flour and sugar, and cut into it small pieces of butter. Break up yeast cakes, and force through strainer into flour mixture; add salt. Beat eggs, add sour cream, combine with flour mixture, and mix thoroughly. Place in refrigerator overnight. Roll to one-half inch thickness, and sprinkle with brown sugar, cinnamon, raisins, and roll up like jelly-roll, then cut into one-inch slices. Put in buttered pan, cut side up, and let rise double in size. Bake at 350 degrees, from thirty-five to forty-five minutes.

PRIZE ICE-BOX STRUDEL DOUGH

one-half pound sweet butter
one-half pound cream cheese pinch salt
two cups flour

Knead flour and salt into soft butter and cheese; and when dough is well blended, and thick, wrap in wax paper and leave in refrigerator overnight. In the morning, let dough stand in kitchen until just soft enough to roll out on floured board. Cut into large squares, and place long strips of Turkish Delight on each piece of dough. Roll up, as for strudel, and bake on a greased pan, in a 400 degree oven, until lightly-browned, watching carefully to see that dough does not burn. When cool, cut in pieces, as for strudel, and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

FIND ANCIENT SYNAGOGUE NEAR NAZARETH

Excavations were begun in the summer by the Museum of Jewish Antiquities of the Hebrew University in the village of Jaffa near Nazareth. The site is a piece of ground near the Greek Orthodox Church. Some months ago, on a visit to the village, Professor E. L. Sukenik was told that a pedestal of a column had been found in excavating the foundation of an Arab house. The appearance of this pedestal, combined with information which he received of the discovery of a mosaic floor nearby, suggested to Professor Sukenik that in ancient times a synagogue had stood here, and excavation has now proved his supposition correct.

A row of similar pedestals has been unearthed, and fragments of a mosaic floor, much damaged but of very fine workmanship, containing also fragments of a circle within which are enclosed the symbols of the Tribes of Israel, each enclosed in a smaller circle which also contains the name of the tribe. Only the symbols of the tribes of the sons of Joseph remain. Those symbols are mentioned in Talmudic literature; and their discovery for the first time in the floor of a synagogue is an important and interesting addition to Jewish iconography.

The village is believed to be Yafi'a in the territory of the tribe of Zebulun (Joshua 19, 12). Josephus Flavius refers to it several times in his books ("Jewish War" II, 20, 6 and III 7, 31, and in his "Life" paragraphs 230 and 270). According to him, this was "the largest village in Galilee". Its inhabitants, with those of the nearby village of Jotapata, took part in the wars against the Romans, and suffered severely in them. The village of Jaffa was also at some time the seat of Josephus himself, when he was Commander-in-Chief of the Jewish army in Galilee. After the destruction of the Second Temple nothing further is heard of the history of the place. The present excavation, however, reveals that a large Jewish population remained there for several hundred years after 70 A. D.

The excavation is being financed by the Fund established by Louis M. Rabinowitz of New York for the exploration of ancient synagogues. The excavation of the Samaritan synagogues at Salbit, near Latrun, last summer was also carried out under the auspices of this fund. Professor Sukenik is assisted at Jaffa by N. Avigad, scientific assistant in the Museum of Jewish Antiquities, and by M. Dotan, a student in the Department of Archaeology of the Hebrew University.

In order to help meet the shortage of American periodicals in Israel occasioned by the Jewish State's lack of foreign exchange for such purchases, the Zionist Organization of America is supplying Israel's citizens with large numbers of free subscriptions to outstanding popular magazines and daily newspapers, as well as substantial numbers of new and used books on a variety of subjects. Over 100,000 copies of representative American magazines have been sent to Israel under the ZOA Israel Projects program. The bulk is being distributed free through the Israel veterans clubs.

● The campaign for a New Jewish Community Centre (YM-YWHA) and new Jewish Home for the Aged, from November 20 to December 17, has a goal of $2,750,000. Of this $1,500,000 will be needed for the centre and $1,250,000 for the home. Co-chairmen are Samuel Godfrey, O.B.E., and Abe Posluns. Campaign headquarters are at 160 Beverley Street. The centre will include the YM-YWHA and give the Jewish community a structure at the corner of Bloor Street and Spadina Avenue, to occupy a large part of a city block. It will be built of red brick and Kingston limestone, three storeys high, with a swimming pool, an auditorium seating 600 persons, large gymnasium, clubrooms and classrooms, lounges, and a solarium. The cost of the centre, including land, building and equipment, will be $1,500,000. The new Jewish home for the Aged will be located on twenty-five acres of land on Bathurst Street, one-half mile south of Wilson Avenue, in North York. At present the Jewish aged in Toronto, and in the province generally, are cared for in an ancient, overcrowded structure on Cecil Street in downtown Toronto. The present Jewish Old Folks Home is nothing more than two old houses converted for institutional use and connected by a wing, and now has 100 residents. It does not have proper medical or recreational facilities nor meet modern municipal fire regulations. The new home will accommodate 180 residents, with an infirmary capable of caring for bedridden residents. The cost of the new Home for the Aged will be $1,260,000, including land, structure, and equipment.

U.J.A. Opens Short-Term Drive For Quick Money

For the first time in its twelve-year history the United Jewish Appeal launched a short-term emergency campaign to raise $50,000,000 in cash before the end of 1950 to effect the immediate rescue of numbers of Jews from eastern Europe, Iraq, and Iran whose legal right to leave for Israel may be withdrawn at any time. In announcing the special rescue drive, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., general chairman of the United Jewish Appeal, emphasized that both the Jewish Agency for Palestine and the Joint Distribution Committee, which receive their funds from the United Jewish Appeal, are without the resources to carry them through the "critical winter months that lie ahead."

Mr. Morgenthau explained that the United Jewish Appeal had exhausted the budget allotted for transportation and that unless new funds are realized within the next fifty days it will be impossible to continue large-scale transports to Israel from Eastern Europe and Moslem countries. At the present time between 18,000 and 20,000 Jews from all parts of the world are being moved to the Jewish State each month. The great majority of these immigrants come from Rumania and Iraq.

He said that the U. J. A. had interpreted as "a mandate from the entire American Jewish community" the decision unanimously adopted by the more than 1,200 leaders of 45 major national Jewish organizations and 500 local Jewish communities at the recent National Planning Conference calling for an emergency campaign.

Mr. Morgenthau warned that the approach of winter had aggravated the position of many Jews in Arab countries who, in anticipation of their scheduled departure for Israel, had sold their homes and possessions. He cited the case of 4,000 Jews in Teheran who, having sold their homes, were living in makeshift tents in the only Jewish public property in Teheran — the Jewish cemetery. "They are hungry, their children are sick, and when night comes they literally rest on the tombstones of their forefathers," he said. "We must bend every effort to transport them to the Jewish State before the end of the year."

Another major problem which has been a source of grave concern to American Jewish leaders, Mr. Morgenthau said, "is the continued existence of immigration camps in Israel where even today approximately 35,000 men, women and children lead unproductive, day-to-day lives." "Israel is doing a magnificent job in reducing the population of the immigrant camps and moving the newcomers out into areas of productive and self-supporting work. However, our immediate problem is not only to provide new homes for those who are still in the camps, but to have the facilities for the reception and care of approximately 40,000 additional immigrants who will reach the shores of Israel before the end of 1950.

"The Jewish Agency has been carrying on a very effective program of reducing the period of waiting on the part of newcomers and their families, and of very substantially cutting down the number of people in the reception camps. But this basic maintenance and settlement activity will have to be very sharply curtailed unless the United Jewish Appeal succeeds in its emergency effort to obtain $50,000,000 before the end of the year," Mr. Morgenthau said.

Chaplains To Be Chosen For Duty By Lot

A "self-imposed draft" to meet the shortage of Jewish chaplains in the U. S. armed forces was adopted by the Rabbinic Alumni of Yeshiva University at an emergency all-day conference at the University, Amsterdam Avenue and 186 Street, in New York. The proposed draft will affect the 503 graduates of the University's Rabbi Isaac Elchanan Theological Seminary now serving in the rabbinate in thirty-six states. In what was described as "the most equitable plan whereby the rabbis would meet their obligations to their co-religionists as well as the nation" the rabbis adopted a program to meet the need for 30 Jewish chaplains by January 1 and 119 by July, 1951. The draft will operate for the duration of the national emergency.

Speakers included Dr. Samuel Belkin, president of Yeshiva University; Rabbi Samuel Berliant, president of the Rabbinical Council of America; Rabbi Aryeh Lev, director of the Religious Division of the National Jewish Welfare Board; Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, a member of Yeshivah's faculty, former Army chaplain and chairman of the convention; and Lt. Col. Samuel Rosen, of the Maxwell Air Base in Alabama. Under the plan accepted by the rabbis, each graduate will be drafted, first, by the rabbinical group in line with the terms of eligibility set-up by the military authorities. Within these limits the rabbis will then be requested to volunteer for chaplaincy duty under a priority system similar to that being used by selective service officials. The call to duty will be determined by a lot drawn by a member of the University faculty. Dr. Belkin told the rabbis that the University will use all of its machinery to implement effectively the draft plans.

Dr. Leon Katz, president of the Alumni Association, said that a special Committe on Appeals will also be established to which all appeals on exemption and deferment will be referred. "Moreover", he added, "a special committee will be established to secure community support in working out the problems of replacement, tenure and position protection. This action by the Rabbinic Alumni is aimed at providing religious ministration for the Jewish service in the armed forces and the rabbis will meet their responsibility to the nation."

WARNS ON MILITARIZED GERMANY

A militarized Germany probably would turn against the United States and become an ally of the Russians, Saul K. Padover, dean of the School of Politics of the New School for Social Research, declared at the monthly luncheon meeting of the New York Chapter of the American Jewish Committee, in the Martinique Hotel. Although the average German is against another war and German industrialists would rather do business with Stalin than fight him, former German officers favor rearming Western Germany, Dr. Padover said. The Russians have ofered the officers better terms, he asserted.

Dr. Padover said that there was no real need for militarizing Germany at present. The danger of a Russian march against Western Europe is not imminent because the Russians learned from Korea that they would meet strong resistance from the United States, he held.

Tourists in Israel are now entitled to special services, including non-austerity meat meals at eleven hotels and two restaurants in various parts of the country on payment in foreign currency. No ration coupons are required for the special meals which will be served to tourists, their families and their guests. Visitors who remain more than one month in Israel will receive a textile and shoe repair coupon, and after three months additional points will be allocated to enable tourists to replace small items of clothing and to make necessary shoe repairs.

My Pilgrimage To Israel

"For out of Zion shall go forth the law,
And the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."—(Isaiah: 2, 3)

What a joy it was for us in Israel on the Sabbath of Nachamu to be guests for Kiddush at the home of Chief Rabbi and Mrs. Hertzog, after attending the Sabbath morning service at Bnai Jeshurun Synagogue where I had been given an aliyah at a most unique service and where I occupied a pew next to my old friend, Rabbi Zlotnick.

Under the able guidance of Rabbi Nathan, of the government tourist bureau, we came to the hospitable home of the Chief Rabbi where a number of guests were already seated around the table and the Rabbi was discoursing on the meaning and significance of the "Sabbath of Comfort" in present day Jewish life. Rabbi Hertzog occupies a unique place in the life of Israel. He is helped in his challenging tasks by a most charming "rebbetzin." It was good to be with both of them and it was equally good the next day on Sunday to revisit them, at which time we were photographed on the verandah of their lovely Jerusalem home.

Canadians are proud when they come to Israel because of Dr. and Mrs. Bernard Joseph. What a spendid contribution to Israeli life, Barney and Goldie Joseph, of Montreal, have made! We travelled with Goldie to "Kiryat Anavim", one of the most successful kibbutzim, and the reason for it all was that this kibbutz was observing its thirtieth anniversary. What a party that was! Thousands from the ends of Israel came to share in this joyous celebration and there were even some Arabs of a neighbouring community present.

It was a heart-touching experience on our way back to Jerusalem from "Kiryat Anavim" to visit the graveside where now lies buried Leila, the young daughter of the Josephs, who died in the Israeli war of liberation and was one of the heroines in the battle of the Negev. All Israel, to this day mourns the passing of Leila. She was a youth of promise. May God bless her memory.

It was good to enjoy the hospitality at the Joseph home, where we met with the then Minister of Rationing and Supply and now Minister of Communication and his precious family. The Josephs arranged that we receive proper credentials for our admittance to the sessions of the Knesset. How thrilling an experience it was to listen to the debates in this historic legislative assembly, the first Jewish assembly of its kind in 2,000 years.

Our old friend, Ambassador James G. McDonald, of the United States, and his charming wife received us at their home at "Ramat Gan". The McDonalds are beloved by all Israel. The Ambassador is one of the best informed non-Jews on Judaism that I have ever known. I rejoice that Dr. McDonald is continuing as the highest ranking American representative in Israel at this critical time for the infant state, when Israel is so much in need of friendly guidance.

Ever precious in our memory will be our chance meeting with so many other prominent folk, among them the Bishop of Assisi, Italy; Eamon de Valera, the former Prime Minister of Eire; Robert Briscoe, the only Jewish member of the Irish Parliament, Ian Peerce, of the Metropolitan, who was soloist at a performance of the Israeli Philharmonic; Dean Dickson, Negro guest conductor of the Israeli Philharmonic; and some of the distinguished professors of the Hebrew University, along with Rabbi Assaf, member of the Supreme Court. Israel is now the one place where leaders of Jewish life do foregather and where one may really touch and commune with some of the choicest of spirits in the world's domains of thought, art, and literature.

What is the relationship between Israel and America? For there are today two great communities, Jewish communities in the world, Israel and America and it is important that there be understanding between these great remaining centers of Jewish life. There is more misunderstanding than understanding and a growing divergence between them. We in America, imagine that all people in Israel are heroes, a folk to whom we have to pay homage. There is no doubt that the people of Israel are to be admired for their achievements. But at the same time there is no reason why American or Canadian Jews should be possessed of any inferiority complexes in their relationship with the Israeli.

American Jewry has written a glorious chapter in Jewish history and American Jewry may yet write another golden period in Jewish history, a period, signs of which are now very much in evidence toward a greater cultural awakening and a greater interest in the religious heritage of our people. The Israelis are mistaken when they seem to think of American Jews only as capitalists and moneyed and do not know that American Jewry is motivated by idealism, for the most part. Of course, the Israelis are scornful of us here in America and Canada because we have given so few of manpower in the building of the Jewish State.

There is no doubt that both America and Israel have now to carry a common burden in preserving Jewish life and the leaders of both of these communities must make an effort so that the people may get to know each other and appreciate each other. Politically, Jews here in the West are citizens of America and Canada and they have no political attachment to the State of Israel. The State of Israel speaks on behalf of its own citizens.

We Jews, along with non-Jewish citizens of the Western democracies, rejoice in the creation of Israel because Israel represents an extension of democracy in the Near East, and we rejoice, we Jews, in the cultural and religious ties which bind us to the people of Israel and which will ever hold us together as a brotherhood. But one thing sure, we who enjoy the liberty of Canada and America are not in exile and we intend in these parts of the world to remain faithful to the heritage of Israel and to further a creative Jewish life.

During 2700 years there co-existed the Jewish community of Palestine and many other Jewish communities outside of Israel. These communities have ever been bound by a covenant of faith, believing that upon Judaism hinges the salvation of humanity. For us Jews of America, our survival is guaranteed when American Jewry will be synagogue-centered and will have its roots in Judaism. There is no hope for us as a creative community if we rely only on charity drives and relief campaigns for the stricken.

There is no reason why American Jews, talented and scholarly, should not at the present give of their gifts in helping in the growth of the infant Jewish State. Indeed, I would say that Canadians and Americans with "know-how" are very much required in Israel today. There are thousands of immigrants who are in need of teachers and social service workers. From Israel, America, too, will benefit by the new Israeli art and literature, so rapidly developing in the land.

Israel's physical capabilities are very much limited. The historic test of Israel will express itself in the realm of the spiritual and the spiritual does not depend on numbers or wealth. Great spirits will yet arise in Israel that will give us new insights and new visions as in days of old. The world is very much in need of morality and truth. If Israel will only be granted peace, if Israel will overcome the external dangers and the internal corruptions, Israel will yet set an example in living, based on the social teachings of the great prophets, an example in a co-operative society. It will yet become the bridge between the mechanistic West and the mystic East and will make a unique contribution in helping to build the Kingdom of God on earth, the world of brotherhood derived from belief in the fatherhood of God.

An official then engaged in defense planning supplemented that idea some weeks later — after the Korean war started on June 25 — by saying that while no draft of women was contemplated "at the outset" of the speeded-up mobilization, there probably would be a registration of women if the war threatened to be a long one, so that information would be available as to the number and skills that could be counted on.

W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, played an important part in the decision to appoint Mrs. Rosenberg Assistant Secretary of Defense. Several months ago he appointed her as consultant on manpower problems to the Resources Board. This did not "set well" with some members of Mr. Symington's labor advisory committee. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was one of those who demurred, suggesting that Mrs. Rosenberg was "not a labor person."

However, Mr. Symington is reported to have informed the labor group that Mrs. Rosenberg was one of a long list of consultants on various problems who would be brought in occasionally. Mr. Green and other labor leaders were somewhat surprised on learning of Secretary Marshall's action in recommending her for appointment as Assistant Secretary, according to the New York Times.

on this score. When the latter has formulated a financial plan, the Special Political Committee will consider the resolution as a whole.

Dr. Mohamed Fadhil Al-Jamali, of Iraq, began the bitter exchange between the Arab states and Israel by declaring that "power politics" has prevailed in Palestine and that the only progress made has been in the direction of "forgetting and ignoring fundamental Arab rights." He said that the only real remedy for the refugee problem is to make "the aggressive people who took the Arabs' homes yield to the United Nations."

Dr. Jamali said that "intervention" by the Arab nations in Palestine did not begin until 250,000 refugees had fled Israel because of "massacres" there but Mr. Eban insisted that the whole problem is the result of "armed violence" against Israel three years ago "by the combined armies of all the neighboring states."

It was evident that neither side is ready to depart from its established position as to the quid pro quo for peace. The Arabs insist that the refugee problem must be settled before any over-all discussion of peace is possible. The Israelis feel that the disposition of refugees is only one part of the whole picture and that it should be considered in that light.

Mr. Eban reiterated his government's previously announced policy that it is willing to engage in direct discussions on the matter as a whole. Concerning the question of compensation to refugees who do not wish to return to Israel, he said that Israel considers it "vital" that such sums should be credited to the reintegration fund rather than paid out to individuals on the basis of separate claims.

The Huleh Concession has a history of its own. A concession for the drainage of Huleh was awarded as far back as 1913 to a Jewish family in Turkey by the Ottoman government. Subsequently, two Lebanese citizens of Beirut acquired it, but nothing was done to carry it out because of lack of funds. The World Zionist Organization negotiated with the Mandatory government for the concession which was eventually bought by a Jewish company in 1933. The trend of events in Israel, however, blocked the beginning of work on this worst malaria area in the country until the J. N. F. took the concession and started its own reclamation project.

ings or on aid from relatives and Jewish organizations.

New registrations of Jews applying for denationalization and permission to leave the country have been running at a rate of about 250 a day. Since children go on their parents' forms this means an actual daily average of 400 to 500. Each applicant signs a statement that reads:

"I declare willingly and voluntarily that I have decided to leave Iraq permanently and that I am aware this statement of mine will have the effect of depriving me of Iraqi nationality and of causing my deportation from Iraq and of preventing me forever afterward from returning."

The long delay before transportation to Israel is provided is a source of dissatisfaction to both the Baghdad Government and Iraqi Jews. No effort is being made to induce the Jews to leave the country. There are an estimated 120,000 Jews in Iraq. In general, those who expect to stay are older people and particularly those who have considerable property and established businesses. The present situation naturally has increased the difficulties in the way of younger Jews' obtaining or retaining employment, since they are regarded likely to remain Iraqis only temporarily.

The newly-formed National Economic Committee of the Zionist Organization of America, charged with the task of encouraging the investment of private capital in economic enterprises in Israel, has called upon the more than 800 districts and regions of the organization throughout the country, urging the immediate formation of local economic committees for the implementation of this major phase of the ZOA program. The call was issued by Albert Schiff, of New York, and Isador S. Turover, of Washington, D. C., co-chairmen of the ZOA's Economic Committee. The Palestine Economic Corporation was endorsed by the Zionist Organization of America at its last annual convention held in Chicago, Ill.

Reflecting a desire to broaden the base of synagogue activity and widen the influence of the synagogue in the total community, the Tri-State Regional Conference of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, in Philadelphia, Pa., recommended: that the congregation accept women as full members of the congregation not withstanding membership in any affiliated group of the congregation; that women be invited to join in the work of executive boards and the congregational-school boards of education; that its affiliated synagogues invite the women in its membership to take a more active role in the work of the congregation.
